

Alin Stefan Constantin, MD

Consultant Obstetrician and Gynaecologist
Endometriosis and Minimally Invasive Gynaecological Surgery Specialist
Vice President, European Endometriosis League (EEL)

Dr. Alin Stefan Constantin is a Consultant Obstetrician and Gynaecologist with a specialist focus on endometriosis and minimally invasive gynaecological surgery. His clinical and academic work is dedicated to the multidisciplinary management of complex endometriosis and advanced reproductive surgery, with particular emphasis on improving patient-centred care and surgical outcomes.

He trained at the “Carol Davila” University of Medicine and Pharmacy in Bucharest and has developed extensive international clinical experience through collaborations with specialist centres in Germany and across Europe. He currently works in advanced gynaecological and endometriosis care, combining surgical expertise with active involvement in international scientific and educational initiatives.

Dr. Constantin currently serves as Vice President of the European Endometriosis League (EEL), where he contributes to the advancement of research, education, and international collaboration in endometriosis management and minimally invasive gynaecological surgery. He is actively involved in multidisciplinary case coordination, surgical education, and the promotion of evidence-based approaches to women’s health.

Alongside his clinical practice, he is engaged in academic activities, professional training, and international congress participation, with a strong interest in advancing awareness and standards of care for women affected by endometriosis and chronic pelvic pain.

Dr. Constantin is recognised for his commitment to innovation, international collaboration, and the development of modern multidisciplinary approaches in gynaecological surgery and reproductive health.
